Energy Conservation Day: Symbolism doesn’t pay

The much-publicised school competition at school level was a good effort to sensitize consumers to influence their energy consumption behaviour. But the effect is minuscule.

As a child, one might have walked or cycled to school. But as a breadwinner, one’s relation decisions get influenced under one’s income level and opportunities/restrictions

Sinking oil: Saudi Schadenfreude

Using lowering oil prices as a tool, the Saudis are seeking to arm-twist Russia and Iran for their support of Bashar Assad’s regime in the Syrian conflict.

If Sunday were celebrated another ‘Oil Price Day’, this time, December 14 has been christened as ‘Oil Price Day’, in the hope that the country could make the price of oil and, consequently, the price of gas cheaper.

At the end of last year, the Saudi Arabia’s Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Resources, Mr. Ali al-Naimi, had announced that the country would not cut its share of production, even if global oil prices weakened. While his country had promised to maintain production at 10 million barrels a day (mb/d) in the second half of 2014, he now maintains that Saudi Arabia would maintain production at 10.5 mb/d for the rest of 2014.

The reason for this change of heart is, of course, recent reports that with greater technology and increased production, America will soon surpass all but Saudi Arabia in crude oil production.
